

I am an ordinary citizen who would like to comment on this. I am strongly against seeing further deregulation in the broadcast industry. I think that deregulation in the radio industry pretty much ruined it, and that Clear Channel is the worst example of what will probably happen with further deregulation. The media are different from other industries; it is the way that the American people communicate and the way our culture is influenced, and it is in our interest as an informed citizenry to have as many possible independent sources of diverse information.
